It might be a nature video or a video that makes people cry. The possibilities are endless and you can even make your own! And you don't need any app, you can use your phone's browser. So here I'll walk you through how to make a loop of any of your favorite clips! Table of Contents How to make a loop of a video First thing you want to do is to find the Youtube link for your video. Here I used the music video for the song "Delicate" by Rihanna. You can see the link here Next step is to find the video you want to make a loop. You have to trim the part you want to keep the loop. I'll show you how to do that in the next step. There are two ways to do it. The first is by using YouTube's own trimming tool, then you'll get the option to trim the loop to different lengths. You can also use YouTube's drag tool to add different parts of the video to the clip. You can add up to two parts, and you can drag the parts from different videos as well. Let's go through these two ways step by step. Trim it with YouTube's own trimming tool 1. Go to the video you want to make a loop. 2. Once you're on that video's page, click on "Edit" 3. Under "Tool" go to "Trim" 4. In "Trim options", click on "Load trim" 5. After that, you'll see this screenshot. Here I've trimmed the video down to the part I wanted to keep. Click "Trim" to start trimming Drag different parts of the video into the clip You can trim the video using YouTube's drag tool as well. But the way I'm showing you works a little different. I wanted to be able to trim the video without having to open a new tab. So I made a few small changes to YouTube's own trimming tool. This is how you can use YouTube's drag tool to make a loop. 1. Go to the video you want to make a 82157476af
